

THE TRIP

An exhalent opportunity to dive the west coast of Scotland before the end of the season.

The water is still warm having heated up all summer. There are plenty of dive sites to be taken in regardless of the weather due to the number of islands and bays.

The scenery as well as the diving is fantastic.

Arriving on the evening of the 16th of November, we will board Honeydew to depart Dunstaffnage marina on Friday morning for our first dive.

The dives will all be from the boat and a mixture of wreck and scenic dives with the possibility of going to look for scallops.

The marine life is abundant, with walls covered in anemones, sea squirts and sponges, lobsters and conger eels. You can also discover wildlife such as otters, seals and skate that teem in these pure waters.

Most of the dives will be within the 10-30 metre range allowing good dive times for everyone. Depending on the dive sites, tide and currents may be present.
